About this Project...

▶ Target: £4,010 / €5,340 | Project 423

Outside of a few bustling cities, the majority of people in the Philippines live in rural village communities which have little access to healthcare and other social services. This is a problem being addressed by the Episcopal Church of the Philippines (ECP), through its Social Ministries' Programme (SMP). For other aspects of SMP's work, see Project 385: Community Action, Philippines. One aspect of this programme focuses exclusively of providing healthcare to remote impoverished communities in the six dioceses of ECP. This Project will fund training for community health volunteers, as well as providing a medical response in times of natural or man-made disasters. In particular, the Project is taking advantage of its wide network of churches, working through congregations and church organisations to reach as many people as possible. This is particularly helpful given the Philippines' complex geography and difficulties with transportation – the country consists of 7,101 islands, although most of the country's 82 million population lives on just 11 of them. This Project aims to empower and equip local communities to be able to support themselves.

Project supporters will receive three newsletters a year and other resources to help promote your Project.
